What is E-Learning...

Electronic learning represents itself from our point of view not the set of defined technological solutions for educational processes but the new form of the educational process which is formed with the usage of Hi-Tech technologies in education.

Creation of means for e-learning quality evaluation

The evolution of our ideas about place and role of e-learning as an implementation object and as an instrument of the education innovations development foresees the development of the ideas about the e-learning quality management system. The world educational services market is going from the quality evaluation to the quality management and then to the quality assurance creation. On this are focused the interests of the international accreditation agencies.

UNIQUE

1. University education process

2. Educational resources

3. Educational context

One of the conditions of the successful integration of the Russian educational institutional in to the International economics is their reorganization according to the international quality standards ISO 9000.

In the frames of the ISO technical committee 461 was created the technical subcommittee 36.

Several years ago in 2003 was created the 5th working group. its activity focuses on the issues of quality and quality assurance in the e-learning. Technical subcommittee 36 has developed the standard 19796-1, which was adopted in 2005.

Conclusion

The university needs to provide certain assurances to the future and existing students, to the employers, to the state, thus to all the stakeholders which exist in the e-learning market. Such assurances can be checked through the international evaluation programs as UNIQUe. for the HEI in order to develop successfully and be competitive on the education services market.
